Rentokil Initial Specialist Hygiene offers a complete range of specialist cleaning services to the maritime sector:

Heating, ventilation and cooling systems (HVAC)

We do it all. From air conditioning systems to grease extraction systems. We'll clean, repair and/or modify the whole system (not just front & end cleaning), reducing the risk of fire, preventing airborne viruses such as Legionnaire's disease and ensuring compliance with the law.

Water drain maintenance and repair

Blocked drain? Reduced flow? Whether it's periodic maintenance or an emergency call out, we can help. Our preventative drain maintenance programme reduces the chance of disruptive, expensive blockages and ensures your pipe work operates at maximum efficiency.

Deep cleaning kitchens, technical rooms and accommodation

Reaching the places you can't reach yourself. We'll remove, clean and replace all your equipment and fittings, removing built-up dirt and grease and disinfecting where needed. Prevents vermin, increases fire safety and ensures compliance with HACCP guidelines.

Salvage after fire or water damage

Fire and water damage can be devastating for a business. A rapid and effective clean up will prevent further damage and financial loss. Our experts can restore your site and equipment to a state ready for restoration and redecoration.

Free camera inspections for air ducts

The only specialist hygiene company to offer companies a free* camera inspection of air ducts. We'll come to your site – wherever it is in the world – and do a full survey, recording our findings on DVD. Whether that takes a day or ten days, you won't have to pay.

*excludes travel & accommodation expenses

We promise total satisfaction

Our commitment to safety, service and quality is absolute.
We are holders of ISO 9001, ISO 14001 and VCA and SCC certification.

Handling the job from start to finish

Mounting a salvage operation after an oil rig fire

Rentokil Initial Specialist Hygiene was busy cleaning the drains of Scarabeo 5, a semisub drilling rig, when fire broke out elsewhere on the platform. An hydraulic oil leak was the cause of the fire.

Thankfully, no one was seriously injured, but there was significant fire damage. So the repair yard asked us to do the salvage work. We spent five weeks on the rig carrying out the technical reconditioning, and we sent five shipping containers to another location to treat and conserve the smaller components with a customised bath line.

Helping the Navy defend against airborne diseases

HNLMS Johan de Witt is an amphibious transport ship of the Royal Netherlands Navy. It's equipped with a complete Class II hospital, including an operating theatre and intensive care facilities. It can also carry provisions for battalion transportation for more than ten days.

In 2011, we were asked to clean all 13 kilometres of its air ducts. We made our site survey and camera inspection while the ship was docked at Curacao. The cleaning was done in line with the Navy's technical specifications when the ship returned to the Netherlands.

Extending the productive life of a North Sea oil unit

Suffering severe storm damage in 2011, the Gryphon Alpha was towed to Rotterdam for repairs. Owner Maersk Oil took the opportunity to upgrade this large, floating North Sea oil unit, extending its productive life for another decade.

Rentokil Initial Specialist Hygiene helped in this massive undertaking, providing 60 men for nine weeks to clean all the technical areas of the ship. This included degreasing machine rooms and thruster tunnels to a level that let the painters start work without the need for preparation.

While we were busy cleaning, the repair yard used our online project management tool to monitor our performance. Everything was transparent, from safety planning to status summaries and schedule variances.

The yard's project leader was delighted with our approach. As he said, "You left us free from worry!"
